people include: improved ability to manage information and knowledge; effective business, planning and decision-making processes and tools; optimized resources; innovation across the Coast Guard; and managed risks. A critical aspect of managing the Coast Guard's intellectual capital is to ensure Coast Guard people have the proper training, education, and intellectual tools to effectively manage the Service. The Strategic Plan also maintains that "life long learning" is an essential ingredient of organizational success and employee satisfaction.

- b. Effective and efficient management of intellectual capital of people requires cross-programmatic coordination of our training, education, and professional development systems. The Director of Reserve and Training has oversight responsibility for the development of intellectual capital and has an expressed interest in the follow-on use of intellectual capital. To assist the Director, a cross-programmatic advisory Council is essential.
- c. This Instruction establishes the Coast Guard Training and Education Advisory Council (CGTAC). The CGTAC replaces the Headquarters Training Coordination Council, originally chartered in 1994 to manage cross-programmatic, non-resident training. CGTAC responsibilities address cross-programmatic training and education system issues, as detailed below.

5. DEFINITIONS. Additional definitions to those contained in reference (a) are:

- a. Cross-Programmatic, Non-resident Training. Non-resident training required of a broad cross section of Coast Guard units with multiple Program Managers and Facility Managers. This can include "all hands" training or training which applies to persons performing similar tasks at different types of units. This does not include rate-related training for advancement. Some examples of cross-programmatic non-resident training are ADP Security Training, Drug and Alcohol Awareness Training, and Sexual Harassment Prevention Awareness Training.
- b. Front End Analysis (FEA). A specific type of performance analysis which systematically analyzes performance problems, or opportunities, impacting any segment of the workforce. FEAs are completed prior to the selection and development of any performance improvement intervention(s), whether training or non-training solutions. FEAs are generally used for workforce performance issues at the individual or unit level. For organizational performance issues, that impact CG-wide systems, a different type of performance analysis is often used.

6. COAST GUARD TRAINING AND EDUCATION ADVISORY COUNCIL. The Coast Guard Training and Education Advisory Council shall serve the Director of Reserve and Training (G-WT) for cross-programmatic training, education, and professional development issues. The Council chair shall be the Chief, Office of Training and Performance Consulting (G-WTT). The Council shall be comprised of voting members and program manager representatives. Voting members shall consist of one representative from each of the following: Chief of Staff (G-CCS), Marine Safety and Environmental Protection Directorate (G-M), Operations Directorate (G-O), Systems Directorate (G-S), and Human Resources Directorate (G-W). Program manager representatives can be from any Program Manager's staff and are encouraged to attend Council meetings. Program manager representatives may be specifically requested by the Council as required for deliberations.
